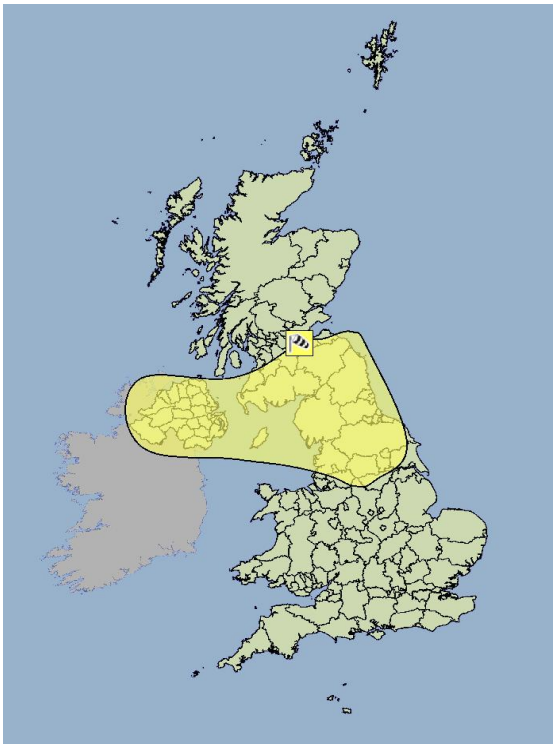
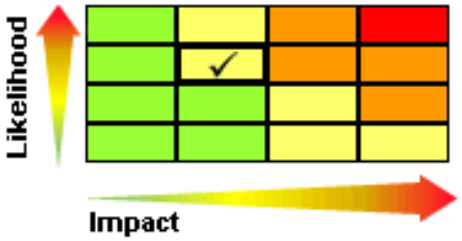
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
The strongest winds are likely over high ground (affecting for example trans-Pennine routes), coastal areas and to the east of high ground. Across Northern Ireland the wind will ease by Christmas Day (Sunday) afternoon, but remain strong across northern England and southern Scotland until evening.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Wind

Valid from 03:00 on Sun, 25th Dec 2016 until 18:00 on Sun, 25th Dec 2016

A further spell of windy weather is expected on Christmas Day (Sunday). Gusts of around 50-60 mph are likely, particularly over high ground. Some disruption to travel is possible and driving conditions may be difficult for high-sided vehicles.
